

District of Columbia Education Licensure Commission

DESCRIPTION:

The Education Licensure Commission (ELC, the Commission) is a five-member Mayoral-appointed regulatory community protection authority charged with establishing quality postsecondary educational standards, and the licensing and monitoring of all private postsecondary educational institutions in the District of Columbia.

The ELC's responsibilities include:

- Developing standards for postsecondary education institutions aligned with nationwide regulatory practices;
- Ensuring that institutions have qualified instructors, appropriate curricula, and adequate resources to implement programs;
- Issuing or denying licensees;
- Maintaining student records from institutions that have closed and issuing transcripts;
- Investigating complaints about institutions;
- Advising the Mayor and members of the City Council on postsecondary education issues; and
- Consulting with the District's professional licensing agencies, neighboring higher education commissions, accrediting agencies and the U.S. Department of Education.

MINIMUM QUALIFICATIONS:

- Must be at least 18 years of age
- Must be a District of Columbia resident
- Must be able to participate in the work of the Commission. Helpful to have knowledge regarding the operation of postsecondary institutions

MEMBER DUTIES:

- Execute consumer protection charges including licensing and institutional monitoring and review.
- Develop policy, make application decisions, and conduct disciplinary reviews.

- Meet eleven (11) times per year to conduct ELC business. Meetings are generally 3-4 hours in length; preparation time varies but averages three to six hours per meeting

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITIES:

District boards and commissions vary in size and complexity. Because board members help shape and influence board decisions and actions, it is important that each member stays informed about issues, legislative activity, and statutes affecting their board or commission.

The guiding themes for boards and commissions members are Service—Responsibility—Integrity
