DCMR Chapter 52, section 5200 requires the following for a homeschooling program:

- Parent/legal guardian must maintain a portfolio of their children’s materials for at least one year after the end of an instructional year occurs.
- The home instruction program must include, but need not be limited to language arts, mathematics, science, social studies, art, music, health and physical education.
- The OSSE may, at its discretion, request to review the portfolio of homeschooling materials.
- Please be advised that home school students who received special education services are no longer eligible after withdrawing from DCPS.

Optional – Reasons for implementing a home school program (for informational purposes only) The Office of the State Superintendent of Education would find it useful to capture the choices of parents and guardians who choose to home school in the District of Columbia.
