2017-18 Schools with Non-Residency Findings

The Office of the State Superintendent of Education (OSSE) conducts an annual enrollment audit in all publicly-funded schools and pre-Kindergarten community-based organizations in the District of Columbia. In the 2017-18 school year, OSSE increased its focus on residency verification during the enrollment audit. When the audit process concludes with schools, OSSE may also follow up directly with families whose schools did not have adequate information to prove District residency. If families do not respond or cannot provide residency, OSSE may find these individual families to be non-residents.

The following list is the schools at which OSSE had non-residency findings during the 2017-18 school year, following the annual enrollment audit. In total, there were 111 non-residency findings across 50 schools. Please note that this list includes non-public schools where students with special educational needs attending public schools in the District have been placed according to the requirements of the individual education program (IEP). It does not include findings from OSSE's in-depth investigation of Duke Ellington School of the Arts. Results from that investigation can be found on the OSSE website.
